RESEARCH INTEREST

My research interests focus on time-series analysis and forecasting based on domain understanding and contextual information in data. I analyze real-world datasets collected from users or industry settings (e.g., VR sensors, biosignals, and parcel delivery demand), and develop AI prediction models that support decision-making. To enable more accurate analysis and model design, I have communicated with interdisciplinary experts, leading to develop the ability to logically define and solve problems. Building on these experiences, I strive to grow as a data scientist who designs domain-specific AI and turns it into practical outcomes.
